

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF TRADE

The regular meeting of the Board of Trade was held on Tuesday in the Wesley Hall.

A report was received from the chairman of the light committee, that steps would be taken to provide the necessary funds to carry on for the ensuing year. A communication was received from the B. C. Electric Railway Co., giving estimates of cost for installing an extra light on the corner of 2nd Street and Bazaar Avenue. A considerable amount of correspondence came under discussion.

One letter dealing with the Indian question, in reply the secretary was instructed to give an outline of the views of the Board.

No report has, as yet, been received from the Health Department, in regard to the condition of the building brought to the attention of the department.

In the matter of the fog signal on the Sand Spit, the report has been forwarded to Ottawa.

A lengthy report was received from the secretary of the Associated Boards of Trade for Vancouver Island, of the proceedings at the annual convention at Courtenay last month.

In reference to the resolution on Noxious Weeds, the following letter has been received from the private secretary of the Provincial Minister of Agriculture:

Victoria, B. C.,
Sept. 2, 1924

Associated Boards of Trade of V. I.
M. C. Ironside,
Sect.-Treas.,
Nanaimo, B.C.

Dear Sir:

In the absence of the Honorable, the Minister of Agriculture, I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of Aug. 30, embodying copy of a resolution passed at the Annual Convention of your organization, held at Courtenay on the 20th-21st August, relative to the enforcement of the "Noxious Weeds Act."

In reply I may say that I have today forwarded a copy of same to the Superintendent of Provincial Police, as the enforcement of the "Noxious Weeds Act" devolves upon the Provincial Police in unorganized districts, but in organized districts, where there is municipal provision for enforcement of the various acts on the Statute Books, the responsibility for enforcement of the "Noxious Weeds Act" rests with the municipality, which has the necessary authority to proceed against those who are guilty of offences.

I note in the copy of resolution forwarded to this office that reference is made only to a request that "the government take immediate and proper measures for the effective enforcement of the Act." I presume, therefore, that your organization has overlooked the fact that the municipalities are jointly responsible with the government.

I shall be pleased to draw your communication to the attention of the Honorable, the Minister of Agriculture, upon his return to the office at the end of this week or early next week, so that he may give the matter such attention as may be considered necessary.

Yours very truly,
F. W. LAING,
Private Secretary

A considerable discussion took place in regard to local conditions; sanitation, garbage, overcrowding, and while it was apparent that there was a divergence of views as to the best methods to be employed to remedy the state, there was a general unanimity that something should be done and that speedily a determined attempt to secure a wider and better support of the work of the Board.

There was a better attendance than of late. The president, Ed. Blackburn, occupied the chair.

SIDNEY SOCIAL CLUB

The regular weekly meeting of the Sidney Social Club was held in Matthews' Hall yesterday evening. Military 500 was played at five tables. The players at the winning table were: Mrs. A. Wasserman, Mrs. G. Cochran, G. Hill and R. N. McAulay.

NEWS BUDGET FROM
PATRICIA BAY DISTRICT

Gardeners' Association of Victoria and District Hold Picnic at Experimental Farm

(Review Correspondent.)
PATRICIA BAY, Sept. 10.—Last Saturday the Victoria and District Gardeners' Association held a very successful and enjoyable picnic at the Experimental Farm. Mr. E. M. Straight, superintendent of the farm, kindly arranged for demonstrations in the various departments of the farm. Not only were the members of this organization interested in the different phases of gardening, but many seemed keen on the talks on poultry. Special arrangements had been made to have sports, ice cream, etc., provided by the picnic committee for the children. The sports committee were: Messrs. W. J. Edwards, George Strawford and F. E. Boulter, the secretary. Nine races were run by the children and a few by the adults. An annual tug-of-war between teams captained by the president, W. J. Edwards, and the secretary, F. E. Boulter, were very exciting and seemed well matched. The latter team won. Altogether this was a pleasant outing and the gardeners enjoyed the day's events.

Mr. and Mrs. John Parkinson, of Victoria, and party of friends were visitors here during last week.

Mr. C. W. Campbell, of Centre Road, left recently for the Prairie, where he will join in the harvesting.

Miss Phyllis Elliot, of Victoria, is spending a week here, the guest of Miss Irene Frost.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Sylvester and little daughter, have recently returned from an enjoyable two-weeks' holiday spent in Seattle and Portland.

Mrs. Norris Gurton, of Centre Road, spent the week-end visiting friends in Victoria.

Mrs. Nelson, of School Cross Road, leaves here on Thursday of this week for a two-weeks' holiday in Moose Jaw, where she will visit friends.

Best birthday congratulations to Ronald Lowe, Thursday, Sept. 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Griffin, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Nunn, of Centre Road, for the past week, have returned to Cortez Island.

Ganges Exhibition
Splendid Success

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor Opened the Show Amid Ideal Weather Conditions-- Many Exhibits of Highest Quality

The Twenty-eighth Annual Exhibition of the Islands Agricultural and Fruit Growers' Association was opened yesterday under ideal weather conditions, by His Honor the Lieut.-Governor C. W. Nichol, who was introduced by the president of the association, E. F. Gibson. His Honor in his opening speech expressed himself as delighted with the beautiful scenery and the splendid exhibition, stating it was his first visit to Ganges, and the great pleasure it gave him to be there. Col. C. W. Peck also made a short speech, in which he spoke of the high quality of the exhibition.

There was a beautiful display of flowers, the exhibit of sweet peas, dahlias and asters being especially fine. The large bowls of cut flowers made an exquisite show. There was a large number of entries in the bread section and also fruit cakes. A bachelor's fruit cake was especially admired, being beautifully designed and iced. There was a great display of fruits and vegetables of particularly high standard, which would lead one to imagine the island a very fertile spot. The poultry exhibits were of a very high class, the chief honors being carried off by Messrs. L. Chaplin and C. L. Cropper. The Gulf Islands Co-operative Jam Factory Association had a fine display of their products.

The log chopping competition was very keen and resulted in some good work. The winners were: 1. Bill Lundy; 2. I. Becker.

The judges were: Poultry, Mr. Terry; domestic economy, Mrs. C. W. Kipp; flowers, Mr. T. W. Savory; field produce, Mr. E. R. Bewell; junior work, Mr. E. R. Bewell and Mrs. C. W. Kipp.

The members of the Ganges tennis club served dinner and tea. Mr. Parfait and Mr. Arthur Elliott furnished the music during the afternoon.

Great credit is due the executive committee for their hard work in organizing the show.

The following are the prize winners in part, the remainder will be published next week:

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE
MONTHLY MEETING

The monthly meeting of the North Saanich Women's Institute was held in Matthews' Hall on Tuesday afternoon. There was a good attendance. The president, Mrs. Deacon, was in the chair. The secretary, Mrs. Jeffries, read the minutes, which were passed. The treasurer, Mrs. Clark, presented the financial report, showing a profit of $15.56 made at the flower show. It was decided to send at once the per capita levy for the conference to be held in Victoria in October.

Mrs. Deacon was chosen as the official delegate, and Mrs. Clarke, Mrs. Readings and Miss Bawden as Institute delegates.

Mrs. Raymond Layard was welcomed as a new member.

Mrs. Layard then spoke on the condition of the Indians in Saanich, telling the members of the recent interview Mrs. Belson, Mrs. Philip with herself had with W. E. Ditchburn, the Indian Commissioner. After discussion it was decided to send the following resolution to the Institutes of the Saanich Peninsula and to the Indian Government officials at Ottawa:

"Whereas the Indians of the Saanich Peninsula, Vancouver Island, are living in deplorable conditions, with diseases such as tuberculosis and scrofula, with no nurse available;

"Be it resolved that the North Saanich Women's Institute do petition the Federal Government to provide a nurse for the Saanich District, who would minister solely to the Indians of the Saanich District working in co-operation with the medical health officer of the district for the Indians."

It was also arranged to ask Mrs. Nimmo to come and give a demonstration on how to crystallize fruit, as she was unable to come today, and to have a silver tea. Mrs. Philip was made convenor. It was left to the executive committee to arrange in evening for a card party. The meeting then adjourned to meet the second Tuesday in October at the Mission Hall, Breed's Cross Road.

"HAPPY THOUGHTS"

A SONG

Written and composed by Bob Sloan

Happy thoughts are things that we should value,
Cultivate and practice night and day.
They cheer us when we'd otherwise be lonesome,
And drive the gloomy side of life away.
It's easy if we only make an effort
To smile at ills and troubles we're heir to,
What's the use of going round amoping?
There's others far worse off than me or you.

CHORUS

So cultivate the happy thought, my brothers,
Sisters, cousins, uncles, aunts too;
'Twill brighten your lives as well as others.
The happy thought's the thing for me and you.

(Repeat)

If some day you go joy riding in your auto—
A Ford, or any other make of "buss,"
And try to climb a tree or jump a street car,
This "cop" should sympathize and make a fuss,
Or land you in the jail for "avinting"—
A thing no cop should be allowed to do,
Content yourself, there's one sweet consolation,
There'll be other folks in jail as well as you.

(Chorus)

I once got married to a lovely female—
A peach without a blemish or a spot,
When later on she left me for another.
I sang, "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot?"
If ever you get married to a damsel
Who quits you just for fun, or takes the rue,
Take my advice and go back to your "mammy,"
Believe me, that's the proper place for you.

(Chorus)

Last night I couldn't sleep for thinking over
A crime I perpetrated years ago,
I stole some apples in a nearby orchard,
Ate them, then my "lummy" let me know
That I'd done wrong—besides, my mother gave me
A spoonful of queer stuff that made me groe,
In my dreams I often hear her softly saying
Other boys got "castor oil" as well as you.

(Chorus)

RAMBLINGS

By the "Rambler"

"If I am even with my enemy the debt is paid; but if I forgive it I blight him for ever."—Penn.

The retirement of Mr. John Hart from the government of British Columbia, as Minister of Finance, marks the close of a public career that has been very conspicuous and eminently successful. To have carried the finances of the province through the past 7 years, and place the credit of B. C. in the proud position she holds today is an achievement, of which he may be justly proud. Mr. Hart has the good wishes of all parties.

Premier Ramsay McDonald and his Labor government are meeting with some success. To have succeeded in securing the consent of Great Britain, Belgium, France, Germany and the U. S. A. to the "Davies" Reparation settlement scheme, is a great result. Improvement of trade, reductions in unemployment also, are to be noted.

Trade returns for July show a favorable balance of trade for Canada. Total exports for year ending July was $1,066,305,260, compared with $994,552,364 for 1923. Less business failures, and an improved unemployment condition, does not agree with the gloomy picture foretold by the Protectionists as the result of the tariff reductions of the last Budget.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, now on his way to his ranch in Alberta, continues to be good "copy" for the newspapers. What he drinks, eats, wears, plays, or where he goes is eagerly sought after even in the "Land of the Free."

"Man is the most combative of all animals. He loves a fight for its own sake. He always persuades himself that it is the cause which interests him, when often it is more the excitement of the struggle."—Lloyd George. How many of us are prepared to admit the truth of this statement, and look the fact square in the face?

Speaking recently at a banquet given in his honor at Dundee, Premier Ramsay McDonald said, "The man who thinks he can do everything in a day, is a quack doctor." "To make the great changes needed by humanity a man must work humbly, patiently and faithfully dealing with the harvest as it ripens and never jutting green corn." "The great thing needed is sustaining truth." Or to use the words of The Book, "He that believeth shall not make haste."

The Prince of Wales does not favor "bobbed hair." "He may be old-fashioned, he states, but he does not like it. Will this mean the death of this fad?"

According to the Press, Mr. Eric Hamber, president of the Timber Industries Council, stated at the recent interview with the Provincial Government, "We have come to fight for our existence." If some of the white men, working in the lumber mills of the province earning 25c and 30c per hour used this language they would be called revolutionaries.

The recent bye-elections in the Province of Quebec resulted in two Liberals being returned. In the Rimouski division the old conservative Isaac was raised, in St. Antoine Montreal division, the tariff was the issue, the previous member resigned in protest against the fiscal policy of the government. The government has strengthened its position in the country by the Budget.

INTERESTING FULFORD HARBOR NEWS ITEMS

(Review Correspondent.)

FULFORD HARBOR, Sept. 9.—

Mr. Percy Horel is to be congratulated on the success of the cabaret dance, organized by him, in aid of the Fulford Hall, last Saturday evening. The supper tables were arranged down each side of the hall, looking very dainty screened off with arches of beautiful floral decorations and balloons. Lamps were arranged on the walls at intervals with gorgeous shades, throwing rays of colored light on the guests as they passed to and fro. The centre of the floor was left free for dancing. The music, which was excellent, was supplied by the local orchestra. There was a splendid program, a turn coming off every now and again, between the dances. The first item was performed by Mr. Smith, of Victoria, assisted by Mr. Eaton, with parlor conjuring. Whilst Mr. Smith performed these difficult tricks Mr. Eaton, who was dressed as a negro, and said he was Rastus from Ganges, showed him up, creating peal after peal of laughter. Miss Bee Hamilton gave a recitation, "Sal before the Judge," by request. Miss Rose Yelding, of Vancouver, a scarf dance; Mr. Jack Harrison a song, "Beauty of the Guards," in character. Mr. Gerald Hamilton, song, "Eighteen Pence"; Mr. Bob Hepburn, song, "It Ain't Goin' to Rain no Mo'."

The school teachers for South Salt Spring are: Miss Dean at the Burgoyne Valley school, who is boarding at Mrs. C. Molloy's; Miss Rogers, of the Cranberry Marsh, has the Isabella Point school, and is boarding at the White House. Miss Dolhmann has transferred to the Beaver Point school and is living in the old Peavine house.

Miss Boston and Mrs. Keith with three children, Mrs. Golding and two daughters, have returned to Vancouver from the White House, where they have spent most of the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Smith and Mr. Donald Smith have been visiting their relations, Mr. and Mrs. Eaton.

AT THE AUDITORIUM

Dorothy Phillips in "Hurricane's Gal"

MISS PHILLIPS IS SEA IMP IN "HURRICANE'S GAL"

Probably the most emotional role of Dorothy Phillips' screen career is the stellar part she plays in Allen Holubar's production of "Hurricane's Gal," a First National attraction which will be shown at the Auditorium on Friday and Saturday evenings. She is first shown as a wild, untamed girl of the sea who inherited warm romantic blood from her Spanish mother and a spirit of hate and lawlessness from her Irish father. She is a wanderer over the seas, mistress of her own ship, with a pistol which aids her in ruling the rough crew and a rag doll, a monkey and a goat as her principal companions. Later we find her, regenerated through love of a man she had believed had treacherously deceived her and installed as mistress of her San Francisco mansion. Both the rough life of the old sailing vessel and exquisite boudoir sets have been used to provide proper background for her most unusual and absorbing portrayal. Wilson's orchestra will supply the music.

"Liver Trouble so Severe I Had to Quit Work"

Mr. Thomas Honey, Brantford, Ont., writes:

"I was a great sufferer from enlargement of the liver for ten months, and finally I had to quit work. I would wake up in the mornings with a bitter taste in my mouth, had frequent headaches, yellow complexion, and pain in my right side, and between the shoulder blades. It was almost unbearable, and terribly weakening. I could not sleep at night and my heart also bothered me. But the whole trouble has now left me, thanks to that wonderful medicine, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

The Doubling of Joseph Brereton

By WILLIAM
R. HODDER

CHAPTER XXXIX.

"How d'you do, Mrs. Cope?" Joe bowed stiffly. "Rachel, this is an unexpected pleasure."

He smiled as he shook hands with Rachel. He felt he had no cause against her; moreover, he was perfectly certain now that he had never been really in love with her. Rachel blushed, and smiled sadly at him, and then darted a fierce glance at Nora, who returned it with interest. Mrs. Cope sat silent, as if she was aware that her very silence was enough for Joe, who, although he did not see how the affair was to end, was still perfectly self-possessed.

"Mother," he said, "could you take Miss Cope into the garden and show her the flowers? I can speak more freely to her aunt if she is not here. No, you needn't go, dad; nor you either, Michael."

"Yes, come, my dear," said Mrs. Brereton, rising with agility.

She felt friendly towards Rachel, because she had come between Joe and Nora—a matter over which she had already exchanged many significant glances with Michael.

When they had left the room, Joe turned to Mrs. Cope.

"I suppose you have denounced me in clear, forcible terms?" he said.

"I did not come here to denounce you," she replied, with her sharp tongue concealed behind a velvety smile. "I came here to ascertain whether or not you intend to marry my niece."

"And why should I marry her, pray?"

Mrs. Cope shrugged her shoulders. "If you are an honorable man, you should be able to answer that question yourself."

Michael grined. Captain Brereton looked grave. Nora sat in her chair like a marble statue.

"Well," said Joe, in rising wrath, "as an honorable man, I swear that I have never made love to Rachel in any way. My conscience is perfectly clear on that point. I did not meet her in New York, nor did I write to her."

"Is that your son's handwriting?" asked Mrs. Cope, passing Somers's pencil note to Captain Brereton.

"Yes; that is certainly my son's handwriting," said he, when he had adjusted his glasses, and glanced through it. "Did you write this, Joe?"

Joe took it, and read it through. "No," he said; "certainly not." Then, turning to Mrs. Cope, he asked, "When was this delivered?"

"About eight o'clock the night before last," she replied. "And, as you are aware, I kept the appointment instead of Rachel."

"Yes; and when you found I was not there, what did you do?"

"But you were there, and I spoke to you."

"I was not there!"

"You were. Surely I can believe my own senses."

"My dear Mrs. Cope, I can prove beyond all question that I left Lime Street for Euston by the eight o'clock train."

"No; you were going by that train, but you sold your cycle to a friend at the station just before the train started, and did not go. Then, about quarter-past ten, you went to the cycle-shop again, and bought another one, which you rode to the station, where you took the 10.30 for Euston."

Mrs. Cope looked triumphant as she concluded what she considered a most convincing proof of Joe's duplicity.

"I did no such thing!" said Joe, hotly. "At half-past ten I was about a hundred miles from Liverpool."

"I expected this," said Mrs. Cope, turning to Captain Brereton with a weary sigh of disgust. "It has been the same all the way through. What your son has said, or done at one time he has contradicted at another. I met him on the landing-stage when I came off the Campania, and he said he had just wired Rachel's address to me in New York. Then I met him again in the evening, and he denied having seen me in the afternoon, and said that he had just ascertained Rachel's address. Now, when I see him again, he denies meeting me in the evening. Such foolish behavior is ridiculous, absurd!"

"Is it possible," said Captain Brereton, thoughtfully, "that it was some one else you met last night—some one whom you mistook for my son?"

At this, Michael, who had been listening with interest to what he regarded as the story of Joe's complete downfall, turned suddenly pale. His brain had been working quickly. Nora, now very alert, glanced up at Joe, who stood gazing at his father earnestly. But Mrs. Cope made a gesture of impatience.

"Impossible!" she said emphatically. "I have known your son for many years. I can swear to him when I see him. Besides—"

But at this moment there was a diversion. Mrs. Brereton rushed into the room in a state of excitement.

"John! John!" she cried. "The men have brought something up from the well. They would not show it me, and they insist on seeing you at once. There they are—look! in the garden."

All those in the room gathered round the window, and looked into the garden. On the lawn were two men, and on the ground beside them was something on a broad plank covered over with sacks.

"It looks like a man on the plank," said Captain Brereton. "Perhaps they've had an accident; and yet there were only two men at the well."

No one noticed Michael. He stood near a side window gibbering. He was gazing before him with eyes into which the sudden gleam of madness had leapt like a flame. With the last flickering light of reason he saw it all—Joe's innocence proved by the evidence of his own guilt.

"Let us cry 'pax' for awhile," said Joe. "Probably this is some poor man who is hurt, and we may be able to do something. Shall we go out and see?"

Mrs. Cope acquiesced in silence, and as they passed out, Nora followed them like one in a dream; while Michael, remaining behind unobserved, stood by the window, looking on at the scene upon the lawn.

Outside the house Joe went in advance, leaving Mrs. Cope and Nora following more slowly. Rachel presently joined them, and in a constrained silence they reached the little group gathered about the "something on the plank."

Joe, who had just preceded them, was saying—

"Well, my good fellows, why do you stare at me in that scarce fashion? One would think I was a ghost risen from the grave."

"That's it, sir," said one of the men, with his eyes riveted upon Joe's face; "that's just what we've thought, sir. This 'ere corpus wot we've fished up out o' the well, if it bain't yourn, sir, me an' my mate'd like to know who's it be, with all doo respect to ye, sir."

Mrs. Brereton, who was trying to urge Mrs. Cope and the two girls to come away from the presence of the dead body, missed this, but the others heard it, and, though they felt an instinctive horror of the "something on the plank," they stood their ground, actuated each by the strongest curiosity, and, in Nora's case, by something more.

"My good man, what do you mean?" asked Captain Brereton.

But before the question was well out of his mouth, Joe, with a swift stride, reached the side of the plank, and, withdrawing a part of the covering, exposed the upturned face of the dead man to view. No sooner had he done so than he started back with a cry of amazement.

"My God! it is my face!"

Nora shrank back, covering her eyes with her hands, and shuddering. Rachel and her aunt looked from one to the other, and finally at Joe, as if they wondered what new piece of incomprehensible nonsense he was trying to foist upon them now. Mrs. Brereton stood aghast and bewildered, while the captain bent down over the corpse to verify the truth of Joe's assertion.

When he rose to his feet and turned towards them, his face told plainly that what Joe had said was perfectly true.

"Mark my words," he said decisively, addressing Mrs. Cope, "this is the man whom you have been mistaking for my son. Look for yourself."

Mrs. Cope drew near, and looked down at the face that might have been Joe's. But before she could utter her astonishment, Rachel rushed to the side of the body, where, kneeling down and throwing off the covering, she found the dead man's hand. She glanced at the crooked little finger, then, turning it palm upwards, she looked at the ball of the thumb. Like a mad thing she seized the other one, and did the same. Then she gave a low moan of mortal agony that was heartrending to hear, and, throwing up her arms, fell forward across the body of her lover, and lay still.

At this moment, Michael, who, with a passing reaction towards sanity, had been watching through the window of the drawing-room, and had seen enough to make him doubt what little reason had returned him, now rushed blindly out from the other side of the house, and fled in the direction of the copse whence the men had brought their ghastly burden.

CHAPTER XL.

"Poor girl!" said Captain Brereton to Joe that evening, as they were sitting in the library; "the doctor says that if she had lived she would have been either incurably insane or a hopeless paralytic. It must have been a frightful shock to the girl to discover at one and the same moment that she loved one man and given herself to another; that the man she loved was suddenly cut off from her, and the man who was rightfully hers was the one that lay dead before her eyes."

"Terrible!" said Joe, shuddering at the memory of Rachel's sudden death. Then, after a long pause, he resumed, "It's a very strange business, the whole affair; and we've not got to the bottom of it yet by a long way."

"That's true. Who was this man? What was his real name? and where did he come from?"

"I have a very strange theory," said Joe. "You remember I showed you the ship tattooed on the dead man's arm?"

"Yes; but how does that help us?"

"Why, don't you remember?"—the man that Jersey Craggs mistook me for in Texas had a Yankee sloop on his arm."

Captain Brereton raised his eyebrows. "You mean that this man was aware of his likeness to you, and took advantage of it to impersonate you?"

"I mean more than that," said Joe, significantly.

He was about to proceed when the door opened, and Peters the butler informed Captain Brereton that Dr. Cantrell had called, and wished to see him.

"Ah!" said the captain, turning to Joe. "I asked him to let me know the result of the post-mortem. Perhaps he will be able to throw some light on what we were just saying. Bring him in here, Peters, will you?"

he concluded, addressing the butler.

In a few moments Dr. Cantrell, a tall, spare, thoughtful-looking man, with penetrating grey eyes, was shown in.

After exchanging a few words with the captain his glance fell on Joe.

"I do not require to be told," he said, "that I have the pleasure of meeting Mr. Joseph Brereton, late of Texas."

"You notice the likeness?" said the captain.

"Yes; I have just come from the post-mortem. No one could fail to notice it. And as there is every proof—"

—or, I might say, appearance of proof—upon the murdered man that he is Joseph Brereton, late of Texas, it may be necessary for your son to prove his identity beyond question. Otherwise there is a great danger of his being accused, not only of being an impostor, but of his being the murderer of this man."

Joe laughed. "There is not much danger of that," he said. "Yet, after all, seeing that the people who know me perfectly well mistook this other man for me, and me for him, it is quite within reason that I should be asked to prove my identity beyond all question."

"Certainly," said the captain, who saw no difficulty; "and especially as the man was not only the image of you, but seemed to know all your business."

"Very well," said Joe; "I can easily prove my identity. Now, dad, can you think of some mark by which you can swear to me as your son?"

"Several," said the captain. "There is that impress of the seal upon your left arm, which you certainly had before you left home. Marks you have acquired since would naturally be ruled out of court."

"Have you the mark of a seal upon your arm?" asked Dr. Cantrell, quickly, addressing Joe.

"I have. Here it is."

Joe bared his arm, and showed the impress of the seal.

"It's!" said the doctor. "Your double has the same mark in the same place."

Captain Brereton knit his brows. "Impossible!" he gasped.

"It is true, however. Have you the seal itself?"

"No," said Joe; "Michael has it."

"My son also has the mark of a gash on his thigh," said the captain, paying no heed to Joe's words.

"And the other has the same."

The captain stated. "It is almost beyond belief," he said.

"Has your son any other distinguishing sign?" asked the doctor.

"Yes. About two years ago my son wrote me that he had had an operation performed on his lower jaw, and the two molars which were removed were replaced by two on a gold plate. Have you those two now, Joe?"

"I have," said Joe.

Both turned towards Dr. Cantrell, who remarked quietly—

"And so has the other man."

Captain Brereton rose from his seat, and began pacing up and down the room, while the doctor remained looking fixedly at Joe, who, with the corners of his mouth drawn tight and his brows let down, was immersed in thought.

"There is some mystery here, which is not so easily settled," said the doctor. "You see, taking it for granted that you are the real Joe Brereton, how can you prove it? You are at a disadvantage, for upon the body of the deceased was found evidence by which no coroner's jury would find any difficulty in identifying him—several letters addressed to him in Texas, a gold watch and chain bearing a monogram 'J.B.', and an inscription showing that it was given him by his father on his twenty-first birthday."

On hearing this, Captain Brereton looked sharply at Joe, as if the thought had come to him that he was not his son at all, but some clever impostor, who had faked himself up in all points to represent his son.

"Look here," said Joe, excitedly. "Listen to me, and see what you can make of it. A man in Texas made my acquaintance by mistaking me for another man, and in doing so he let drop by accident that the only differences between that other and myself were that he had a front tooth gone, whereas I hadn't, and that he had a Yankee sloop tattooed on his arm. I saw a great deal of this man, and we became friendly. Several weeks passed by, and then one night, under circumstances which showed plainly that his object was to kill me, he bedded my man by his hand. Now, the point of my story is this: In the morning I found that there were various articles missing from my clothes which I had left in my room—my watch and chain, all the papers and letters from my pocket, my belt with my initials stamped on it, an old pocket-knife, and a gold and amber cigarette-holder. All these were missing, and I make a shrewd guess that all these articles were found upon deceased."

"They were," said the doctor, quietly. "I see your idea perfectly. You would say that the man who thought he had stabbed you went to the man for whom he had mistaken you, and faked him up in all points to represent you, and that this man, of course, is the deceased, from the fact of his having a Yankee sloop on his arm."

"That is precisely my theory," said Joe, almost smiling at the man's sagacity.

But his face fell beyond all smiling as the legally minded medicine man continued—

"Well and good; but the tale does not prove anything. Remember, I speak impartially, as an onlooker and a friend of Captain Brereton's. If you are the real Joseph Brereton, or if you are the counterfeit, what you have told us signifies nothing, as a little thought will soon show you. It was only necessary for the counterfeit to know that the real man possessed these articles in order to be able to say that he, the real man, was the counterfeit, and stole them. You see, it is a case in which the impostor could tell the same story as the genuine person, with some few trifling alterations. The Yankee sloop, for instance, which you say was on the impostor's arm, might in reality have been upon the real Joseph Brereton's arm, executed quite lately."

NOTES BY THE WAY

By "Observer"

Many of the members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, while in Vancouver, paid a visit to the Reserve of the Squamish Indians, needless to state they were shocked by what they saw. This seems to be the decision of all who make it their business to investigate into the state of our aboriginal races.

It is time that conditions should be changed, and the only way is to make a complete change of the Department supervising the Indians. The Minister in charge of the Department at Ottawa, to whom the Indian agents make their reports should be made aware of the conditions surrounding the various reserves in B. C. So far the only interest taken in the Indians of B. C. is to try and take from them their various Reserves. This can easily be done, as many of the older Indians who have the decision are uneducated, and can be easily led.

But times are changing, and the younger generation, if led in the right way, will be a credit to themselves and this country. The Indians must be allowed to progress, and to do so they must be assisted by all those who come into contact with them. Indian Agents must do their duty, and not only draw their pay. Medical Officers must pay more attention to their health, and the government must see that if diseased that they have sufficient attention to cure them if possible, if not, they should be taken care of and kept by themselves and not be a menace to their fellow tribesmen and the people of this country. The various schools, which are under the care of the several churches should be certain that the students they pass through their establishments should be grounded in habits that will enable them to live healthy lives, and also to be able to teach those around them how to live, not in imitation of the white man, but as they should, to live a clean and healthy life. But first, we must have good, conscientious officials looking after their welfare, and not only drawing their pay and making reports, but energetic and self-sacrificing men, who would give their best to their wards, and not look upon their occupation as a "job."

Then will our native neighbors progress, and we will not have outsiders come in and point the finger of scorn at us.

The leader of the Opposition is prophesying that there will be another local election in short time. We hope not, as we have had enough waste of money in that way for this year at least. We hope that the new government will get down to business and economize. The Premier has decided to do away with one portfolio, and merge it with others, we hope he will see some way to do away with some of the surplus staff among the several government offices. But this reorganization may result, as many have done, in an increase of staff. A good weeding out might put more energy in the remaining members of the civil service, as they would see that they would have to work to hold their jobs.

A good deal of exception is being taken to the idea of having another Normal school at Nelson. Most of the provinces of Canada have only one Normal school, and British Columbia has already two, which schools last year graduated six hundred pupils. As three hundred teachers form to be the limit of absorption in B. C., it seems needless to increase the facilities for making teachers. Rather let us have a higher standard for our teachers. As B. C. has isolated herself by her restrictions against teachers from other provinces, there is very little chance for a B. C. graduate on the Prairies. But let us not think of more Normal schools, better to spend the thousands in bettering our smaller country schools, and let the present establishments look after the educating of the teachers.

We have been very fortunate this summer in not having any drowning accidents, but why should not all our young people be taught to swim? Surely we have some good swimmers in our midst who would take an interest in teaching our young idea to swim. We have heard reports of some accidents which nearly proved fatal, but surely, with all our water front, we should not be backward in letting the boys and girls learn to handle themselves in the water. Who will volunteer for this duty?

The want of proper road signs is being daily brought to the notice of the people in this vicinity by the number of tourists who arrive here from the vicinity of Victoria asking to be shown where Butchart's Gardens are situated. The junction of the Keating's Cross Road and the East Saanich Road is so congested with all sorts of road signs, that the motor driver misses the small sign that is placed there. Perhaps next year? There may be a change. But why wait until next year?

The Dutch gardeners have taken our native Trilliums and have domesticated them and are finding a very large market in the Old Country. This is a business that could be taken up by some of our good gardeners, as we have a plentiful supply of these plants as foundation stock.

LADIES' AID MONTHLY MEETING

The members of the Ladies' Aid of the Union church met at the home of Mrs. Jackson, Queen's Avenue, on Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 10, sixteen members being present. After the monthly business being disposed of, the members had rather a busy time making plans for a "chain dinner," which will take the place of "The Tour Round the World," and will be given the latter part of October. Mrs. Jackson, assisted by Miss Alice Watts served refreshments. The next meeting will be held at Beach House on October 8, when Mrs. Bowcott and Mrs. Ormond will be the hostesses for the afternoon.

Here and There

Although Alberta only became a province eighteen years ago, its population has increased fourfold, while the grain yield has increased twentyfold. The total agricultural products of Alberta in 1923 were worth $223,000,000.

The scheme for the settlement of British emigrants in Canada may assume a new aspect as a result of the presence in London, England, of the Hon. J. A. Robb, Canadian Minister of Immigration. Canada favors the movement of entire families to Canada from Great Britain, rather than that of single men.

Among the biggest muscalungs caught this year was one landed at the Canadian Pacific Railway's French River (Ont.) Bungalow Camp, by Samuel Franklin, Southern Sales Manager of Claflins, Inc., New York City. Mr. Franklin had a light tackle and had never hooked a lunge before. He had a hard fight to secure the fish, which tipped the scale at 38½ pounds.

A total of 13,743 Canadians, most of them native-born, has been repatriated from the United States during the months of April, May and June, according to figures announced by the Department of Immigration. During these three months 59,425 persons immigrated to Canada, which represented an increase of 12,292 over the same period of last year.

Marquis wheat, originated at the Dominion Experimental Farms and now world famous, has successfully invaded South America, being grown in the Argentine Republic last year with results that, according to authorities there, exceeded the expectations of the most optimistic advocates of the grain. Further shipments of seed are being made to the Argentine by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association.

One of the most diverse and interesting aggregations of passengers ever assembled in Canada left Montreal for Europe on August 20th aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Minnowa. It included Majors S. de Belles and Brito Nair, who recently flew from Lisbon to Macao, China, a large party of scientists returning from the recent convention of the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Toronto, Colonel Geo. Ham, general and internationally known "ambassador of the Canadian Pacific" and "Soldier" Jones, Canadian heavyweight boxer.

The first all-British direct cable service between Montreal and London was opened on August 18th by the Canadian Pacific Telegraphs. As business warrants, this service will be extended to embrace other Canadian cities with which it is now connected but which, as yet, cannot offer a reasonable return for a regular service. Messages were exchanged between the London Chamber of Commerce and the Montreal Board of Trade and between the Canadian and the English headquarters of the Bank of Montreal, conveying expressions of mutual goodwill and prophesying closer relations as a result of the improved cable facilities.

ADVERTISING ADVERTISING

Not without a touch of humor were the very earnest and business-like proceedings of the world's greatest International Convention of Advertising, held at the British Empire Exhibition. It was a great advertisement for advertising. If the organizers had designed to prove that even advertising can be boomed by advertising they could not have succeeded more completely. This assembly of experts in propaganda was heralded for months by insinuating propaganda; the Prince of Wales and the Secretary of State for the Colonies were present at the inaugural gathering; statesmen and leaders of commerce added to the gaiety and the dignity of its sessions, and newspapers without exception paid tribute to the important role now filled by the agent of publicity in business. Advertising, as His Royal Highness said, has become at once a science and an art. The science consists, no doubt, in knowing the lines along which to attack; the art, in convincing the public that the article advertised is essential and the cheapest because the best. These are not the days when enterprise can afford to hide its light under a bushel. So potent an instrument has advertising become that the agents themselves, with so much knowledge of the craft, would have been more than human if they had abstained from a proclamation of their own merits and achievements. They are looking for new worlds to conquer. They have made discoveries—one being that it pays to be truthful. "Truth in Advertising" is the slogan, which Sir Robert Horne suggests they will no doubt use with discretion. What Abraham Lincoln said of politics might almost apply to advertising. "You can fool some of the people all the time; you can fool all the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time." Advertising is only really worth while when the first people to respond are so satisfied that they talk of their bargains or their benefits. A word at a dinner table may be either anathema or fortune.

C. N. R. MAKES BID FOR B. C. RAILWAY

M. H. McLeod, consulting engineer, Canadian National Railways, has made an offer to Premier John Oliver for acquisition by Canadian National of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway. Mr. McLeod and D. A. Campbell, construction superintendent for the C. N. R., left immediately for a trip through the towns of the Cariboo, through which the P. G. E. runs, to spend a week sizing up the possibilities of the P. G. E. territory from a colonization standpoint. Canadian National engineers are now in the field looking over the whole scheme.

Mr. McLeod is willing to take over the P. G. E. as it stands from Clinton to Quesnel, and on to Prince George, but would join up with the C. N. R. at Ashcroft by abandoning the P. G. E. for those sections east and west of Lillooet. These rails he would lay between Ashcroft and Clinton and make a through connected line of the project.

Quite the biggest feature of Mr. McLeod's proposal on behalf of the Canadian National Railways, aside from the lure that it holds to lighten the burden of taxation which P. G. E. losses now charge up to the provincial government, is the fact that he is considering the P. G. E. situation in its relation to the development of the Peace River country. He will be ready shortly with a recommendation of what, in his opinion, is the best way to carry out the wheat from the Peace River country so that it can be brought to Vancouver over the C. N. R. and P. G. E.—Financial Post.

Sidelights on a Great Industry

A BUSINESS BAROMETER

CONDITIONS IN THE FOREST INDUSTRIES REGULATE THE PROSPERITY OF THE PROVINCE

Lumbermen Furnish Main Clientele of Business Firms and Professional Practitioners

A merchant remarked recently: WELL-KNOWN B. C. retail "The lumber trade is my business barometer. I regulate my business, my advertising and the activities of my sales department by the strength or weakness of the lumber market."

Another prominent Vancouver retail merchant says: "I cannot say, of course, how many of my customers are actually loggers or lumbermen, or their wives, or sons or daughters, but I do know that if I lost the business I do with the people who depend on the lumber industry for their income, I would have to shut up shop and move out of British Columbia."

Forest Industries Motive Power

These two cases go to prove the truth of the statement that the Forest Industries are the motive power of this Province's progress.

One-fourth of the working population of British Columbia are on the payroll of the lumber industry and they, with their families and dependents, must necessarily constitute the main support of the storekeeper in our cities, towns and settlements.

How many of these, but for the business the lumbermen brings them, would also be compelled to "shut up shop and move out of British Columbia?"

This series of articles communicated by the Timber Industries Council of British Columbia.

CROP REPORT

MONTREAL, Sept. 4.—Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the head office of the Bank of Montreal from its branches. The branch managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the districts mentioned.

General

While slight damage from frost and rust is reported from some districts, conditions on the whole during the past week have been favorable in the three Prairie Provinces. In Manitoba and Saskatchewan cutting is general. In Alberta due to cool weather and in the Northern parts rain, cutting will not be general until end of the present week. In Quebec a certain amount of damage has been done to grain by recent storms. Harvesting has commenced and indications point to a good crop. In Ontario growth continues satisfactory. Harvesting progressing rapidly under favorable conditions, with prospects of a good all round crop. In the Maritime Provinces crop conditions have been much improved by recent heavy rains. In British Columbia harvesting is progressing satisfactorily in hot weather, but continued drought is adversely affecting roots and fruit. Details follow:

Prairie Provinces

Edmonton District.—Harvesting delayed by cold weather, slight frost, but no damage to grain. Calgary District.—Weather cold but harvesting progressing favorably; light frost Olds and Okotoks; no damage. Lethbridge District.—Conditions favorable. Harvesting general. Late crops South Western area ripening rapidly. Saskatoon District.—Cutting general. Some grain being cut before fully ripe to minimize damage from frost and saw fly. Wheat has filled well but crops unovened and weeds prevalent as result of rains in August. Late crops have been damaged by frost. Regina District.—Crops being harvested under favorable conditions. Some damage reported from frost, rust and high winds, but average yield expected. Winnipeg District.—Under satisfactory weather conditions ripening continues and wheat cutting is becoming general. A better than average yield is expected. It is now apparent that grades and yields in South Western Manitoba will be reduced by rust and blight and in some areas by frost. Oats, barley and rye crops good.

Province of Quebec

Harvesting of grain progressing as rapidly as weather permits. Corn has made good progress. Average yield expected. Root crops, while in good condition, require warmer weather and less moisture. The yield, however, is expected to be large. Apple and plum crops will be light. Grass pastures in good condition.

Province of Ontario

Threshing general. Yield of Fall wheat well above average. Second crop Alfalfa and Red Clover very heavy. Spring grains good average crop. Weather conditions during week very favorable for corn and roots. Corn borer plentiful in certain districts. Small fruits good, peaches, plums and apples below average. Grass pasture excellent.

Maritime Provinces

New Brunswick—Recent heavy rains beneficial. Potatoes continue to make satisfactory progress. Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island—Conditions generally good. Annapolis Valley—Apple prospects much improved.

Province of British Columbia

Harvesting progressing satisfactorily in dry hot weather but continued drought adversely affecting roots and fruit. Wheat 90% of average, with oats slightly better. Roots from 70 to 80%. Hop picking commenced, crop good. Okanagan apples sizing and coloring well. Mackintosh heavy, crop now being picked. Plums 40% of average. Prunes 45, peaches 42, pears 73, crabs 80, apples 70.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

FROM MAYNE ISLAND

On Wednesday afternoon the members of the W. A. met at Mrs. Coates house for their monthly meeting. Those present were: Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Porter, Mrs. Hayton, Mrs. Rawlings and Mrs. West. After the meeting Mrs. Coates served tea.

The tennis match which took place at Port Washington between the local club and the Pender team resulted in a victory for Port Washington. A very delightful day was spent by the visitors and they are all looking forward to another match next year. Those going from Mayne and Galiano were: Mrs. Elverson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Coates, Major and Mrs. West, Capt. and Mrs. Waugh, Miss Gurney, Miss Maude, Mr. Burdill, Mr. Gurney, Mr. Hall and Rev. B. and Mrs. Porter, who kindly took some of the members down in their boats; Major West taking half of the team.

On Friday evening a small dance was held at the Mayne Island Hall. Everyone who went had a very jolly evening, and the dancing ended shortly after 12.

The Doubling of Joseph Brereton

Both Joe and Captain Brereton saw the force of the doctor's argument. The captain then began to see further.

"There is a master-mind behind all this," he said; "that is evident. This has not been done in a stupid, bungling fashion. The man who could take stock of such details as the mark of a wound on the thigh and two back teeth on a gold plate, would have taken good care to acquaint himself even with my son's history, right down to the little odds and ends stored in his memory."

"And therefore," interposed the doctor, "you would say that it is useless your trying to swear to your son's identity by anything he might remember of his early youth. You are quite right. You could prove nothing that way."

"Precisely," said Captain Brereton.

"Confound it all!" said Joe, starting up, "I shall begin to doubt my own identity in a minute. D'you mean to say that an impostor could know things that I've got stowed away in the corners of my memory? Look here! I can take you to a certain tree in the park where Nora and I carved our names seven or eight years ago. Does that convince you? I can point out—"

"It is no use," interrupted the doctor. "Any number of these things the clever impostor may have gleaned from the real man, or by careful observation since his arrival here. Mind, I'm not saying you are the impostor; but until you can prove negatively the identity of the deceased by proving positively your own, you must admit that you may become an object of suspicion."

"Yes, yes," said Joe, more calmly. "I will try to think of some way. Nora may be able to help me. Can we have her in, dad?"

"By all means," said the captain; and he left the room to fetch her. (Continued next week)

Letters to the Editor

The Editor assumes no responsibility for communications published under this head. Communications must be signed by the writer, but not necessarily for publication.—Ed.

Victoria, B. C.,
Sept. 6, 1924

The Editor,
"Sidney & Islands Review,"
Sidney, B. C.

Sir:

There has been some discussion in the recent public press as to the advisability of changing the name of Vancouver Island. The writer expresses no opinion of this particular question but wishes to bring seriously to the notice of your readers the subject of changing the name "Salt Spring Island" to "Admiral Island," the name which still appears on Naval charts. ...o doubt the idea, which is by no means new, will be termed the crazy notion of a crank, and instead of arguing the question, at length, it is proposed to note in this communication only some of the chief points to be considered.

In the first place, the springs from which this charming and delightful Island takes its present name are not clear, bubbling fountains, but obscure and unattractive exudations, which might well be compared to running sores. Apparently they are of no use, but, on the contrary, are reported as being detrimental to the land contaminated by them. Their existence is actually unknown to many of the residents of the Island! It is unfortunate that these barely-known eruptions should give its name to such a particularly lovely and fertile spot.

The name "Salt Spring" savors rather of the backwoods, it has an acrid, unpleasant sound—at any rate to a stranger—and cannot be compared with the fine, mouth-filling word "Admiral." (In parenthesis, it may be stated that not long since a tourist quite seriously remarked that "S. S. 1" stood for "South Slivash Island"!)

Another point to be noted is that place-names of points on the Gulf Islands are very frequently the names of naval ships and officers; for instance, Vesuvius, Ganges, Burgoyne, Mayno, Pender, to mention only a few, and "Admiral Island" is an apt and compatible name for the largest Island of the group.

It will be objected that a change of name involves a deal of trouble, that "Salt Spring" butter, jam, etc., have established a market under that name, but that difficulty can be overcome with a little goodwill and co-operation. The present name is familiar enough to old-timers, and, no doubt, few of the community give the subject a thought, but the future must be considered and an attractive name is a most valuable asset to any place, especially so when dealing with prospective settlers. Who would be interested in "Vinegar Flats" or "Alkali Creek," for instance? Or go to a doctor surnamed "Butcher"? Changes of place-names are quite common and have been made locally in more than one case without serious inconvenience.

The inhabitants of the delectable Island are peculiarly sound, dependable and progressive—they are no doubt attached to the familiar name of "Salt Spring" and may be loath to vary it; but such a natural feeling will not blind them to the advantages of a change, troublesome as such an alteration may prove for the time being. The community spirit, which is so remarkable a feature of Salt Spring life, if brought to bear on the subject will quickly overcome the difficulties, more apparent than real, of reverting to the old name.

It is to be hoped that this letter will call forth expressions of opinion from some of your Island readers.

Yours faithfully,
"AN OLD GULF-ISLANDER"

NOTE—The history of the name of the Island is as follows. (See "Place Names of British Columbia" by Captain Walbrahn): 1854 named "Chuan" by Sr James Douglas; 1856 named "Salt Spring Island" by Hudson's Bay Co.; 1859 named "Admiral Island" by Capt. Richards (H. M. Survey Ship "Plumper"); 1905 named Salt Spring Island" by the Geographic Board of Canada; (The original Indian name does not appear).

Port Washington,
Sept. 1, 1924

Sir:

Whether a correspondence in the press ever leads to any conclusion, I know not, but I do not feel inclined to let "Rambler's" further remarks to Gen. McRae go unanswered.

He says that the General "can only hurl insinuations and innuendoes at his political opponents." To bring this correspondence to a straight issue, I would ask "Rambler" to specify any innuendoes or insinuations the General has ever made.

Accusations, yes, plenty of them, and the Provincial Party with Gen. McRae at the head at least, showed them sincerity in asking for a Royal Commission to investigate, we should hardly have done that if we had not thoroughly believed in the truth of our accusations as we do now.

Rambler talks about the courts, surely if Gen. McRae's statements are untrue, it is for those libelled to bring action against him, as Rambler says he is a rich man and could pay damages.

But where is Mr. Bowser, Mr. Oliver and even Mr. Sloan, who filed an action for libel, apparently for election purposes, because we have heard no more of it since. I can, I think, safely say that there is nothing that Gen. McRae would like better, because in the courts the truth could be brought to light in a manner impossible at a so-called Royal Commission.

In conclusion and to keep strictly to the point let Rambler state categorically any innuendo or insinuation ever made by Gen. McRae.

N. LEWIS.

consideration on a drilled property being used in connection with everything. A well well enables one to have as much water as one requires for any and all purposes, whether it is for stock, irrigation or personal health and comfort. A property is of small value without a plentiful supply of good water the whole year round, and a drilled well, by insuring this, enhances the value of the property by much more than the cost of the well. Success without water is impossible.

RUDE RURAL RHYMES

TOMATOES

The classic orange, with its flowers, perfumes the air in southern bowers and hangs a halo on the bride which frequently is justified. Its golden fruit is so romantic it darn near drives the poets frantic, with thoughts of kindred tropes, of sugarcane and anorectles. But I choose rural themes like Cato and sing the Bonny Best tomato. No orange you have ever bit has got a blooming thing on it. I'm glad that when the summer heats have made me choosy in my eats, tomatoes come with ripe skins, brimful of health and vitamins. When winter rages o'er the land, I eat the ones that Hannah canned. You ought, like me, to form the habit and when you see a good one grab it. I bless the orange on its journey from Florida or California. No word of mine shall do it dirt, although it's very apt to squirt, both in my eye and on my shirt. But we whose wallets are not weighty should stick to fresh and canned tomato, and suck its juicy vitamins till they run down our double chin.

ADVERTISING PAYS

The merchant who does not advertise is as far behind the times as the old-time stage coach. He plods along in the same old way, year after year, while the more progressive merchant places his wares before the public and increases his business year by year. Persistent advertising has made millions for many progressive merchants, who recognized the value of advertising from the first day they commenced business. The Review goes into almost every home in the district and is the proper medium for reaching the people.
